'We considered wellness from every angle, right down to colour psychology,' says Inhabit founder Nadira Laji. It's the philosophy behind this hotel in London's Paddington – likely to be Inhabit's first of several – that promises to soothe guests via a host of holistic initiatives, from a curated library to a meditation pod. Set across six Georgian townhouses and designed by Caitlin Henderson, much of the interior is sustainably sourced, including handmade pieces from Carl Hansen & Son and social enterprise Goldfinger Factory, which teaches craftsmanship to disadvantaged young people (doubles from £180; inhabithotels.com).
